Brief description of the project

Summary of project:

The conference is a meeting place for social change, focused on the intersection between technology, culture and society, bringing together people from a wide range of fields, and merging the technical with the social, seeking both to activate and challenge. Discussion between attendees are at least as important as the presented talks. We attempt to stimulate discussion by inviting speakers to present on important subjects like freedom of speech, patent law, alternative models of organizing society, the role art and culture plays in our economical system, and discrimination. The conference is non-profit and peer-organized by members from Sweden, Iceland, Norway and a number of European countries. This will be the 12th incarnation of the FSCONS event and the 2nd to be organized in Oslo.

The project's Nordic dimension

Describe the project's collaborators, participants and target groups:

FSCONS Norway and Föreningen FSCONS are organizing the conference together, forming the main organizing body. We also have satellite collaborators in Iceland, Hungary, France, Italy, Denmark, Slovakia and Germany who will be working on inviting speakers. Participants are mainly from the Nordic countries but we have visitors from all over Europe and some travellers from North America. Target groups: Young people, students, people working in politics, journalism, technology and art, readers and writers interested in this planet and its people who wish to see a sustainable future.

Describe the partners' engagement and role in the project, and how the project promotes collaboration:

FSCONS Norway provides the venue and hospitality, while Föreningen FSCONS and our satellite collaborators define the content of the conference by inviting participants. The goal of FSCONS is to inspire free-thinking individuals to collaborate in creative ways and to do so in a participatory and inclusive way. We believe that most such collaborations start with a conversation, and FSCONS aims to be the place where that conversation starts.

Describe how the project thinks beyond a national perspective:

Our events stated goal is to foster new conversations across disciplines and borders. With that in mind, past conferences have defined a focal point for participants mainly from Northern Europe while been a meeting place and inspiration for collaboration across borders.
